Jim Bright, Principal

North Carolina born - and Washington, DC based designer, has been a successful artist in paints and drawings. His lifelong connection with Carolina furniture crafters and textile manufacturers are the foundation for a passion of defining interiors. Jim integrates his art talents into interior spaces using polished and keen eyes with bright twists.

Prior to opening his own firm, Jim was a contract designer with Beekman Group of Washington, DC and New Hope, PA, working on a variety of commercial and residential projects. Surrounded by like minds and inspired by art history, Jim pursued his dreams further working with top New York designer and mentor, Eric Cohler and the firm Eric Cohler Design, Inc. Projects included high-end residential and model residence design of 995 Fifth Ave. (formerly the Stanhope). His experiences finally led him back to Washington, DC, where he realized his ambitions by launching Bright Design Group.

A resident of Washington, DC, Jim lives in a mid-century townhouse near historic Capitol Hill where traditional character meets modern lifestyle. He continues to paint art in his home studio and often for client projects. He is involved in many organizations including the National Trust for Historic Preservation and the Corcoran Museum.
