Bright Design Group Defines an Urban Residence in The Sonata.

WASHINGTON, DC, December 4, 2008 - Jim Bright and Bright Design Group renovated and furnished a two-bedroom downtown loft condominium in The Sonata tower.

Commissioned to create and define a client's secondary residence, the request was modern, with a traditional twist. The mix is a common approach and one familiar to Bright, whose concept was "an open urban-feeling environment that combines an inviting sense of home".

Inspired by floor to ceiling windows curving to frame a skyline view of the District's buildings, Bright skillfully used a balance of custom materials, patterns and an unexpected painted black ceiling, evoking dramatic day and evening moods. Further enhancing the residence, a marriage of tailored furnishings in luxurious fabrics and collections of original fine artwork by Robert West and Frank Hallam Day, push casual livability to high style. For an entertaining lifestyle, the furniture can easily be transfigured without altering the room's sophistication.

The windowless master bathroom was reconfigured to accommodate the clients' preferences that included eliminating the existing soaking tub and small shower. Bright's new design encompasses a dual-sided, eight-foot shower using integrated glass walls and an open entry. Giving a nod to the client's request, the new shower visually expands the bathroom space while showcasing the grain movements of the imported stone and wall tile.
